- How does ~~Latin~~ Latin treat the theme of marriage "Whitson's weddings".
- Critically analyse the manner in which Hughes injects a sense of energy, power and violence in the representation of the Hawk.
- Critical appreciation of the poem 'Digging'.

② → Ted Hughes' poem Hawk Roosting first published in ¹⁹⁶⁰ the volume Lupercal is a very powerful modern poem. The poet presents the hawk in a state of roosting that is immersed deeply in meditation. The thought-process of the hawk emphasises its instinctiveness, vitality, power and violence. With the help of some well chosen images, Hughes powerfully portrays them. The poem presented in the form of a monologue or soliloquy. The hawk is the only speaker in the poem and it speaks out its thoughts. One may see that Hughes' hawk retain all its predatory qualities and it symbolises the Darwinian aspect of nature that is nature's 'red in tooth and claw'.

The opening lines of the poem give us the image of the hawk comfortably perched in its nest 'in the top of the world'. The hawk is perfectly satisfied and thinks of itself as the lord of the world. Its position is unchallenged and fearless. It enjoys all the advantages of the high trees, for example, 'the air's buoyancy' and 'the sun's ray'. It can easily glide over the wood and keep constant watch on what happens beneath.

The physical imagery is used to describe the physical form or shape of the hawk, it is suggestive of brutal force, energy and power. Its little body, in fact, packed with power. There is no sophistication or artificial refinement about its body 'no falsifying dream / between my hooked head and hooked hooked feet. The imagery of 'hooked head' and 'hooked feet' is suggestive of its brutal ruthless force, power to kill. It is claimed that the 'whole of creation' was taken to produce its powerful foot.

Like its power-packed body, the manners of the hawk are straight-forward, full of constant action. Its only concern in life is to kill. Even in sleep it rehearses 'perfect kills and eat'. The ^{of} imagery 'tearing off heads' asserts violence and brutality in the bird. It appears as the agent of death of its victims and it is delighted in the 'allotment of death'. The hawk thus puts its proud proclamation — 'the one path of my flight is direct / Through the bones of living'.

Though no suggestion is left in the poem, the thought-process of the hawk may be seen as a metaphor for the mind of every megalomaniac and ruthless dictator. Like a cruel and arrogant dictator the hawk ~~is~~ lives according ~~to its~~ ~~rules~~ to the rules of its own morality in a world where might is right. The vanity of the human beings and the belief of their dominance or superiority over all is quite evident here.

Finally the poem may be studied to

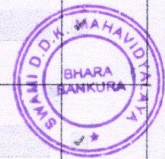

to have a strong ~~ironical~~ ironical implication as well. The bird is misled a lot in its egoistic thought-process. It poses to be the lord of the universe, which in fact, it is not. Again the hawk believes that it can keep the world unchanged. An intelligent reader can easily see the hollowness of such a claim.

Suggestions for improvement/progress of the department	For this "Academic Audit of Department", here the entire college or institute has been considered as a single department, whereas it is always preferable that it is done separately for all individual departments. With combined efforts from all ends, doing all the jobs (e.g., making lecture plan, making faculty diary, etc.) in timely manner without keeping pending, documenting all the activities in systematic manner, engaging students in more and more co-curricular and extra-curricular activities in parallel with curricular engagements, finding new innovative ideas to utilize the hidden talent of students, analyzing examination-results subject-wise and teacher-wise for the further betterment of the teaching-learning process, this college, under the able leadership, can definitely excel further. It is strongly advisable that for all the items receiving "Poor" or "Satisfactory" grade, proper planning and perfect implementation need to be done, so that betterment may be achieved in following years. Even for items receiving "Good" grade, scope of betterment always exists.

1. The new DVV and SOP guidelines available on the NAAC website were widely circulated among staff members. A hands on workshop and training was organized by Librarian Ms Payel Shee to demonstrate the process of data compilation, resizing of data and filling up of data templates in compliance with NAAC directives and specific guidelines. Staff members sought clarification on various technical issues and a technical and data operating team was formed under the supervision of Payel Shee to ensure smooth completion of the SSR.
2. A team of Technical experts from Bankura Sammilani College accompanied by NAAC/IQAC coordinators visited the college premises to further educate the NAAC technical team operating under the leadership of Ms Payel Shee. The team of experts explained the process of data compression to the requisite size of 5MB and also explained the process of generating hyperlinks for SSR content.
3. A Seminar on Intellectual Property Rights and another on Research Methodology was organized by the IQAC in collaboration with the Teachers' Council with a view to promotion of ethical, scientific and relevant research. The twin seminars focused both on the legal and academic component of research in terms of strategic and scientific ways of extracting data and analyzing information.
